

Star. Maripuro then we started at being now our wish to get an account of wood
And catch an eye of fish
That day we having raised the land stupidly high to lower
Laid the main topsail to the mast
And sent two boats on shore
The land is high and rugged to
The shores is iron bound
No harbor round the island is Not anchorage here is found
The mountains here well stocked with game
Which easily can be shot
And wood and water on the beach
In plenty may be got
The shores all round are lined with fish
Of a superior kind sort
And at all times and seasons here
In plenty they are caught
The fifteenth of the month we left
And hauled out wind in shore
And steered for Valparaiso port
As we had done before
The thirteenth and twentieth day of the month
The land appeared in sight
The man of Valparaiso had
And lay off and on all night
At 12 o'clock the following day
We in the port did go
The water thirty fathoms deep
Out anchor and set
